IGP Institute Hosts IAOM–KSU Introduction to Flour Milling Course

The International Association of Operative Millers (IAOM) and the IGP Institute at Kansas State University held the IAOM–KSU Introduction to Flour Milling Course August 16–20 at the IGP Institute Conference Center. The course provided an overview of the milling process to a group of 10 participants from various milling and manufacturing companies, and was taught by IGP faculty members from the Department of Grain Science and Industry at Kansas State University.

Course manager and instructor, Shawn Thiele, stated that the objective of the course is to provide an understanding of the milling process and how the various types of wheat and wheat quality affect flour functionality and the baking process. In addition to classroom lectures, participants experienced hands-on learning in the Shellenberger Hall tabletop milling lab, the Hal Ross Flour Mill, and the baking lab where they milled wheat and then baked cookies, bread, and cakes using different types of flour to demonstrate the effects on finished product quality.
